The Resource Person opined that when it comes to financing startups and emerging companies, many people mistakenly equate angel investing with venture capital financing. While both are popular means of funding new businesses and provide much needed capital for companies that are strapped for cash, the similarities end there. There are significant differences between angel and venture capital funding both the characteristics of the investors themselves and the terms of their investments. Both the angel investors and venture capitalists can act as catalyst that significantly facilitates the startup's growth. The webinar thus aimed to develop entrepreneurship skills amongst the students to make them young women entrepreneurs for the economic development of future India.

OUTCOMES

- Enhanced Understanding: Participants gained a thorough understanding of the distinctions between angel investing and venture capital financing, including the characteristics of investors and investment terms.
- Women Empowerment: The webinar empowered young women by providing them with insights into funding opportunities for their entrepreneurial ventures, particularly focusing on angel investment and VC funding.
- Essential Entrepreneurship Skill Development: Attendees developed essential entrepreneurship skills necessary for launching and managing startup ventures, fostering self-reliance and innovation.
- Inspirational Leadership: By featuring Dr. Joshy K.T. as the resource person, a retired regional manager from Oriental Insurance Company, the webinar provided inspiring leadership examples and real-world insights into the entrepreneurial journey.
- Contribution to National Development: By encouraging and equipping young women to become entrepreneurs, the webinar contributed to the economic development of India, aligning with the goals of the Azadi ka Amrit Mahotsav initiative.

Overall, the webinar aimed to empower and equip young women with the knowledge, skills, and connections needed to thrive as entrepreneurs, thereby contributing to the economic growth and development of India in its 75th year of independence.
